

The threat to Pittwater from these reforms

Proposed changes to planning laws mean:

- A shift from the current emphasis on 'orderly development' to one of 'economic growth'
- Reduced local protection of bushland, threatened species, coastal areas, waterways and building design
- Consultation about the future character of Pittwater driven by sub-regional boards representing up to 500,000 people - with only one Pittwater representative
- Community consultation at the DA stage of development either eliminated or substantially reduced
- Substantially reduced notification of developments to neighbours
- Sweeping powers for the NSW Minister of Planning, including allowing the approval of prohibited developments under so-called 'compatibility certificates'

Proposed amalgamation of Pittwater with Warringah and Manly Councils means:

- Greatly reduced local representation to ensure protection of Pittwater from over-development
- Pittwater rates likely to increase due to higher land values than the rest of the northern beaches and the possible removal of rate-pegging
- Pittwater residents will no longer have an independent Council representing their interests
- A shift in spending on infrastructure to regional priorities elsewhere eg. Warringah Aquatic Centre upgrade; Dee Why Town Centre Masterplan and community hub; Glen Street Theatre and Belrose library upgrade; PCYC at Dee Why
- Reduced access to community and health services due to centralisation in other areas of the northern beaches eg. Dee Why/Brookvale and Frenchs Forest

The reforms

Planning Reforms

NSW planning laws will be replaced by a new system aimed at fast-tracking development by the end of this year.

The main changes are:

- 80% of DAs approved without neighbours input
- Developments of up to 20 townhouses or units approved without consultation
- Wider residential zones, meaning in theory a factory could be built next to a house
- If a council refuses a development, the state government can override the decision.

Council Reforms

The NSW government has commissioned an independent report on local councils. The report recommends:

- Amalgamate Pittwater with Warringah and Manly Councils
- Create a northern beaches council of 250,000 residents
- The removal of rate-pegging, meaning rates could rise annually by around 6%

A final report will be delivered to the government in September, after which the government will consider its position.

The White Paper & independent report are on exhibition for public comment until 28 June 2013.

Pittwater's position

At its meeting on 6 May 2013 Pittwater Council voted unanimously:- "That Council remains committed to a strong independent Pittwater Council providing local representation and delivering local services to the people of Pittwater."

Pittwater's History

Pittwater Council was formed in 1992 after two decades of lobbying by local people - the first new Council in 100 years.

Previously, Pittwater was part of the 'A Riding' of Warringah Shire Council, one of four Ridings. In comparison with the others, A Riding had a large backlog of work – yet the highest rates.

The movement for a separate council began in the mid 1980s.

People's concerns centred around

- over-development and inappropriate development
- protecting Pittwater's sensitive environment,
- the lack of spending on infrastructure in Pittwater,
- a low level of service compared with the rates paid by Pittwater residents
- lack of community consultation.

These concerns reached a height in the late 1980s, following approval by Warringah Shire Council of the 8-storey Peninsula Plaza at Mona Vale and a unit development at Palm Beach. These approvals were partly the cause for the second dismissal of Warringah Council in 1987.

A voluntary poll resulted in over 73.5% of voters asking the state government for a separate council, which came into being in 1992.

Pittwater's Financial Health

Over the past 4 years Pittwater Council has had its finances independently reviewed by both IPART and more recently the NSW Treasury (TCorp).

TCorp's 2013 Financial Sustainability Report rates Pittwater Council as one of the top 30 Councils for financial sustainability in NSW.
